

Paper Costs You...

You put a lot of time and effort to make your client's position understood clearly. Today, you are not only competing against the other side but also for the judge's attention. More firms are using E-briefs to clearly and precisely present the support for their case to the court and in arbitration. E-briefs are easier for your decision makers to consume and ensure you won't lose your audience. How will you compete with that?

Electronic Briefs Save You

A hyperlinked electronic brief (e-brief) won't make your argument better, but it will make your argument better understood. Federal district and appellate courts appreciate e-briefs and many federal judges have begun asking for them. State courts in Colorado, California, Arizona, Texas, Arkansas, Washington and Delaware have specific policies for hyperlinked e-briefs.
